Has Weak Spots.

Saturday's football games and their coults were more interesting than arrarising. Perhaps the only unexpected things about them were surprising. Per expected things about them were vales comparatively easy handing of the Army, and Princeton's score sgainst the strong Sewance team, Harvard ran up a good score against Harvard ran up a good score against Maine. Out played discouragingly. Cornell's defent by Fordham was not altogether unexpected, while it was known that the Navy had much to fear from its game with Villanova. Penn had its customary experience with Brown, though the latter's weaker form beined. Williams, hopeful of beating Dartmouth, proved to have shot its bolt against Harvard.

Yale Smeared Forward Passes.

For the first time this season Yale ran against a consistent offense and it took time for the lineamen to solve West Polnt's wide-open style of play. But they did solve it and before the game ended were smearing the wide end runs and the forward passes, which at first proved most effective. Hyatt's first attempt at the pass caught the Elis napping completely for a 40-yard gain. Thereafter the receiver of passes was so completely blocked that all but one bit the Harvard Showed Line Weakness.

Harvard did not derive a great deal of comfort from its 17 to 9 victory over Maine for there were line weaknesses which didn't atone for the three touchdowns. Backfield strength and a shaky line were the conditions which prevailed. The superior playing of the races made the attack go for points, yet the Maine backs made big talks through the Harvard line. Maine made first down through the date for three for something like life yards. Harvard used an open deficies when the ball was in Maine territory, to which it attributed in part the guing made against her. Harvard Showed Line Weakness

LESS SPECULATIVE INTEREST. Narrowing Resources of Money Market the Probable Cause.

New York, Oct. 19 .- The salient fact New York, Oct. 19.—The sainent fact discernible in the stock market of to-day was the decrease of speculative interest. Doubtless the primary cause of this is the narrowing resources of the money market, although the immediate tone of money is easier in New York than was the case last week or the week before. Apparently the speculative element is not senguine in its hope that this relief is to be free from interruption between now and the end being the political of the work and Bridge work is the work that stands the test of time.
